Bellflower Unified Students Return to School

BELLFLOWER – Balloons and bouncy houses, Buccaneer PRIDE and college classes greeted Bellflower Unified students as they arrived at Bellflower Middle/High School on Monday for their first day of classes. And – coming soon! – a state-of-the-art soccer field fit for the school's 2017 CIF champions.

"It's always exciting to see the students return to school, and this year, we have many new opportunities to present to them," Principal Mike Lundgren said.

The school, which enrolls about 2,500 students in grades seven through 12, was decked out in balloons and, for the first time, a series of bouncy houses, slides and games as a way of bringing students together on their first day.

"On our first two days, we really try to bring home the message of Buc PRIDE – Positivity, Respect, Integrity, Dedication and Excellence," Lundgren said. "It is our mantra."

On Monday, students rotated through activities, including a welcome back activity, team-building by grade level with the bouncy houses and a DJ, and exploration of college and career options. On Tuesday, the PRIDE message is reinforced in a positive way during classes. The effort is part of Bellflower Unified's Positive Behavioral Interventions and Supports (PBIS) system of discipline.

This year, Bellflower High students have the option of taking a pair of college classes through Cerritos College. Taught on campus, the classes include English 72 for juniors and English 100 for seniors. English 100 substitutes for Advanced Placement (AP) English and, if passed, provides college credit without requiring students to take the AP test. Another benefit: The senior class provides a year of high school English credit but only requires a semester to complete. So far, 22 seniors and 33 juniors have signed up for the courses

"We are constantly looking to partner with our local community colleges," Lundgren said. "We would like to expand this partnership, possibly adding math classes next year."

Just before school started at 9:30 a.m., parent Tracy Hightower was saying goodbye to her two sons, Julian, 12, who will be in seventh grade, and Angelo, 16, a junior.

"I like that they're able to come to the same school together," said Tracy Hightower, who is the secretary for the school's Parent Teacher Student Association. "I really like the staff. It's a good environment for unity here."

Julian Hightower said he is looking forward to seeing his friends and getting busy again after a relaxing summer. Angelo Hightower said his priority this year will be high grades.

Because the school includes middle and high school, Bellflower High students help to mentor the seventh-graders through Link Crew. The team includes Krystal Leyva, 15, a junior.

"We help them find places and give them guidance," she said.

Meanwhile, workers this fall will complete construction of a new soccer field. The field, which also will be used for junior varsity and frosh football, will feature the highest of quality artificial surfaces. Bellflower High's soccer team won its second CIF title in three years in 2017.

Also as part of the project, a reconfigured parking lot will provide safe and easy access to campus for students and to athletic events at Ron Yary Stadium for community members.
