Covina-Valley Unified High Schools Launch Job Search for Next Head Football Coaches

COVINA – Covina-Valley Unified’s Covina and South Hills high schools are each searching for qualified candidates for their next head football coach. Both schools are looking for coaches who will help coordinate all aspects of their football program and foster the development of student-athletes.

Covina High School has an outstanding football team—winning the Sierra League Championship and reaching the California Interscholastic Federation (CIF) quarterfinals in 2021.

South Hills High School also follows in a strong football tradition, winning five CIF titles – most recently in 2018.

The ideal candidates must have at least three years of high school or college football coaching experience and be eager to support the growth of student-athletes.

The candidates must also exhibit excellent sportsmanship, promote fan involvement at games and special events, and exercise positive communication strategies, strong organizational skills, and safety awareness in their work with fellow coaches, staff, parents and community.

To apply, candidates must submit an employment application, resume, three letters of recommendation, CIF Certifications in Concussion in Sports and Sudden Cardiac Arrest, a confirmation of TB clearance and current CPR/First Aid certification. Covina-Valley Unified School District will not accept online copies of CPR/First Aid certification.

This position is compensated as stated in the District’s stipend salary schedule.

All candidates must submit their applications through EdJoin. The job postings are open until filled. More information is posted at <https://www.edjoin.org/cvusdk12>.
