Buena Park School District Educator Named Teacher of the Year Finalist by State Superintendent

BUENA PARK, CA – Career Technical Educator Shelley Andros’ unending drive to encourage her students to excel in coding, engineering, robotics and horticulture has earned her recognition as one of California’s Teacher of the Year finalists.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tony Thurmond presented the award during a virtual ceremony, lauding Andros and her fellow winners for empowering their students and communities.

“It is an absolute honor to represent the Buena Park School District and my amazing students with this award. To be named among so many great teachers is inspiring,” Andros said. “I will use this distinction to encourage my students to turn their passions into careers.”

Andros was also selected as Teacher of the Year by her District, one of the 2020 Top 10 Educators of Orange County by Parenting OC Magazine and a 2021 Teacher of the Year by the Orange County Department of Education.

Andros has taught horticulture, robotics and computer science at Buena Park Junior High since 2017. She also started the school’s Femineers program, advises on the science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) sailing program and coordinated the District’s first VEX Robot Nation Tournament.

“Congratulations to Shelley Andros for being named to such a high honor by State Superintendent Tony Thurmond,” Superintendent Dr. Ramon Miramontes said. “Shelley distinguishes herself in everything she does, whether it’s teaching robotics or horticulture – she is an inspiration to our students and her colleagues.”
